The Honorable Neera Tanden
Director, Domestic Policy Council
Executive Office of the President
1650 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20504

Dear Director Tanden:

As we commemorate the first anniversary of the White House's important "United We Stand" Summit held on September 15, 2022, we are again tragically reminded of the too frequent devastating violence that hate can produce. We appreciate the meaningful steps President Biden has taken to address the scourge of hate crimes — from signing the COVID-19 Hate Crimes Act, which included the Khalid Jabara and Heather Heyer NO HATE Act, into law, to his willingness to name and denounce white supremacy and center the victims and survivors of hate crimes and their families.

As you know, The Leadership Conference is a coalition of more than 240 national organizations committed to promoting and protecting the civil and human rights of all persons in the United States, and its Hate Crimes Task Force includes civil rights, community, religious, and educational groups that work together to address and prevent hate crimes. Our member organizations and staff were grateful to be able to provide suggestions and participant recommendations and to attend and support the United We Stand Summit. On the heels of the horrific murders in Jacksonville, and as we approach the anniversary of the United We Stand Summit, The Leadership Conference and its Hate Crimes Task Force write to request a meeting with the White House Initiative on Hate-Motivated Violence and to request a public report on progress made on the ambitious government initiatives announced at last year's summit.

Last year, the United We Stand Summit thoughtfully brought together local, state, and federal policymakers, civil rights groups, faith and community leaders, law enforcement officials, and survivors of hate to counter the corrosive effects of hate crimes. As we approach the one-year anniversary of this summit, the latest mass hate crime — in which three Black people were murdered at a store in Jacksonville, Florida — serves as a stark reminder of the repeated devastation that hate has on communities across the country.

Our communities are facing an unprecedented threat from the hate-filled forces that seek to divide our nation. While we know that hate crimes are significantly underreported, we also know that the annual data published by the Federal Bureau of Investigation demonstrates trends. 2021 was the highest year on record for reported hate crimes and had the lowest amount of participation from law enforcement agencies since 2012. Furthermore, as outlined in The Leadership Conference Education Fund's report "Cause for Concern 2024: The State of Hate," hate crimes increase during election cycles.

Countering these trends requires action from all of us. We hope to strengthen our partnership with you to help address the trend of increased hate crimes.

We respectfully request:

1. A meeting with the White House Initiative on Hate-Motivated Violence. We were pleased to see that the very first commitment made at the summit was the establishment of the White House Initiative on Hate-Motivated Violence, but we are unaware of the initiative meeting with our member groups — or, to our knowledge, with any outside stakeholders. This initiative is an opportunity for the administration to demonstrate that the fight against all forms of hate and bias are part of an interconnected struggle for equality and justice. Below are recommended priorities for a meeting with the White House Initiative on Hate Violence:
 - a. Discuss concrete steps that various federal agencies such as the Department of Housing and Urban Development, Department of Agriculture, and Department of Health and Human Services can take to increase awareness about hate crimes, better understand the needs of people targeted for hate, and understand the public health implications of hate violence, and
 - b. Highlight and identify efforts to advance community resiliency and scalable community-based and community-centered responses to hate and violent white supremacy.
2. A public report detailing progress made towards the summit’s ambitious and impressive government initiatives. A number of ambitious and impressive government initiatives, along with several public-private partnerships designed to foster unity and build community trust and resilience, were announced at last year’s summit. Follow-through and implementation on these initiatives will be critical. Public reporting will be an important way to promote transparency on implementation progress as well as to continue to engage communities. We very much hope to be partners in accomplishing the summit’s ambitious, short- and long-term objectives.

If you have any questions about the issues raised in this letter, please contact Nadia Aziz, senior director of the fighting hate and bias program at The Leadership Conference, at aziz@civilrights.org.
