

Black Lifetime Judges Confirmed During the Biden Administration

President Biden has appointed 58 Black judges, including 37 Black women, who are now serving lifetime appointments on the federal bench. Importantly, more than 40 percent of these judges come to the bench with significant experience protecting and advancing civil and human rights.

This fact sheet only includes Article III (lifetime) confirmations.

- President Biden has appointed more Black lifetime judges than any previous president in a single term. This includes the first Black woman appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court — Justice Ketanji Brown Jackson.
- Since 2021, the Senate has confirmed 14 Black judges to federal appellate courts, including 13 Black women. Before President Biden, only eight Black women had ever served at this level of our federal judiciary.
- President Biden has appointed the first Black lifetime judges to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit (Tiffany Cunningham), U.S. District Court for the Western District of Louisiana (Jerry Edwards, Jr.), and U.S. District Court for the District of Hawaii (Micah Smith). Judge Melissa DuBose, who would be the first Black lifetime judge (and first lifetime judge of color) on the U.S. District Court for the District of Rhode Island, is pending before the Senate.
- In addition to the U.S. Supreme Court, President Biden has appointed the first Black women to serve as lifetime judges on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit (Arianna Freeman), U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit (Dana Douglas), U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit (Nancy Abudu), U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit (Tiffany Cunningham), U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Indiana (Cristal Brisco), U.S. District Court for the District of Maryland (Lydia Griggsby), U.S. District Court for the District of Oregon (Adrienne Nelson), and U.S. District Court for the District of Rhode Island (Melissa DuBose).
- More than 40 percent of confirmed Black judges are professionally diverse — having worked as either a civil rights lawyer or public defender (or both) or otherwise dedicated a significant portion of their careers to protecting people’s civil and human rights.

Appointment of Black lifetime judges — by presidential term

President Biden’s appointment of 58 Black lifetime judges is the highest in a single term.

During his one term in office, President Carter appointed 37 Black lifetime judges, including an impressive number of Black civil rights lawyers and other historic and remarkable Black jurists. President Clinton matched that number during his first term as president. Over the course of their two terms in office, President Obama and President Clinton each appointed 62 Black judges.

During the Obama administration, Senate Republicans blocked committee consideration of several Black nominees — including Rebecca Haywood (Third Circuit), Abdul Kallon (Eleventh Circuit), Jennifer May-Parker (Eastern District of North Carolina), Myra Selby (Seventh Circuit), and Patricia Timmons-Goodson (Eastern District of North Carolina) — and Majority Leader McConnell refused to hold votes on (and skipped over) several Black nominees on the Senate floor, including Donald Beatty (District of South Carolina), Stephanie Finley (Western District of Louisiana), Julien Neals (District of New Jersey), and Edward Stanton III (Western District of Tennessee). Neals was ultimately confirmed in 2021 as the first lifetime confirmation during the Biden administration. Beatty, Finley, Haywood, Kallon, Selby, Stanton, and Timmons-Goodson were all replaced by President Trump with white nominees.
